Bank Opens New Branch Monday

THE FIRST-STROUDSBURG National Bank will open its Bushkill office for business Monday morning. Hours initially will be from 9 a. m. to 1 p. m., Monday through Friday, and 9 a. m. to noon Saturday.

The office is located in the former post office building, just off Route 209 at the blinker traffic signal. H. P. Merring, bank president, in announcing opening of the office said it is evidence of the bank's confidence in the growth and development of the Eastern Poconos area.

The building has been leased by the bank and has been renovated and decorated. Although small, it is capable of handling all banking services. Parking space is Frederick D. Slutter, auditor of the parent bank, has been named manager of the new office. Free souvenirs will be distributed Monday on a first-come, first-served basis and Slutter has issued an invitation to residents of the area to inspect the premises.

The new office is part of an expansion program in tended to give the public better and more convenient banking service. Monday will also see the removal of the bank's consumer loan department from 4. S. Seventh St., Stroudsburg, to the bank's Arlington Heights Branch at 1110 N. Ninth St.

"Fill Real Need"

Merring said the new Bushkill office should "fill a real need" in that part of Monroe County where residents and businessmen had to travel many miles to conduct banking business.

He added that the bank expects to play a major role in development of the area.

It took a farmer who operates 1,200 acres of grain and dairy land near Big Flats, N.Y., to give Washington bureaucrats a first-hand demonstration of how farm support programs actually work.

A guest of New York Sen. Kenneth Keating, the farmer breezed into Washington in a $6,100 automobile purchased with farm subsidy money. He said he received $3,049 in May for taking 104 of his 262 feed-corn acres out of production; and expects $3,663 in the Fall under the feed-grain program.

These programs are designed to reduce surpluses in feed corn and grain sorghum stocks, but William T. Smith, the farmer, says they won't work.

"I put more fertilizer on my remaining acreage and hope to get as much corn as I did last year, and other farmers are doing the same thing," he ex-

What the Big Flats farmer is really saving is that the old-fashioned law of supply and demand offers the best solution for controlling farm surpluses.

When farmers know that consumer demand alone will determine the prices of their commodities, they will tailor their supply accordingly.

But as long as Uncle Sam will shell out billions in subsidies, they are being well paid to over-produce.

AUCTION SALE JULY 15th-1 P.M.

Poplar Valley Social Hall Route 191 sed Furniture, Refrigerator Dishes, Garden Tools, Etc. Refreshments & Home Baked Goods

The Wyckoff Shopper

Wyckoff's has been the official center for Girl and Boy Scout equipment and uniforms for so many years, we frequently overlook the fact that many newcomers to the area may not know this. So, thanks to a prod in the typewriter by Marion Drake, who has left some acts and figures on my desk, maybe I should remind you today that, if you are the mother of either a girl or boy Scout, Wyckoff's is your efficient, official, convenient shopping center.

According to Marion here are some of the items that are most needed right now, by Girl Scouts:-official camp uniforms, of aqua Dan River cotton that renuires little or no ironing. They are fashioned with onvertible collar and a Girl Scout insignia strip on the shirt pocket. The smart, cuffed shorts have back elastic, zipper closing, and are priced at 4.25.

Forest green shorts, of all-cotton twill striped in white, are stocked in sizes 8 to 20 at 1.95. A cotton knit shirt of green and white stripe, sizes 10 to 18 is just 1.15. Bermuda shorts of dark green gabardine also sizes 8 to 20, are 3.95, and the white wash-and-wear blouse to go with them is 2.95.

Scouts are also asking about their official Girl Scout sweater, and these pretty things of 100% orlon in sizes 10 to 20, are 4.95.

It seems to me that Girl Scout apparel is much more attractive today than in my scouting days. should check up. Maybe they've added a new Girl Scout rule: "a Girl Scout's duty to herself and to others is to look her prettiest at all times." Whether or not this is true, it's a good idea . . . don't you agree?

Lovers of glass will appreciate the charm of a shipment of ash trays, new to our gift department. They are square in shape, with an insert of milky white between two layers of glass, forming a scalloped contour. The price is so tiny it's laughable-three for 1.00, and one may choose from a lovely pale green, a brilliant burnt orange, delicate blue, yellow, or orchid. The burnt orange and orchid interests me particularly, since one so rarely finds pretty accessories in these shades. The orchid, by the way, just matches the container of an insect-repelling candle also sold in our gift department, and would probably blend very well with a tall, textured orchid lamp just arrived in our lamp department. I enjoy going on these "coordinating sprees" through our store, trying to see how much could be purchased at Wyckoff's if I had the money and inclination to change my entire color scheme around, and start furnishing anew.

Wyckoff's is always looking ahead, so it should be no surprise to anyone that 1962 calendars are already on sale in our stationery department. You'll find them, illustrated with colored photographs of horses or flowers, on display in a card rack otherwise devoted to CHRISTMAS greetings. Speaking of Christmas reminds me too of a rather sizeable display of gold (brass wire) sleighs decorated with red beads, selling in our gift department at 59c. They are small-about 5 inches ong and 3 high, perhaps, and could be used in many delightful ways . . . One of the prettiest memo pads I've seen, because it's so very feminine, is priced at 1.00. It is enclosed in plastic fabric in pink and white gingham pattern. In script is the message, "Make a Note" A dainty nosegay of flowers in a ruffle trims the cover, The accompanying pencil is also touched with pink. It is an inexpensive gift for an ultra-feminine girl or woman . . . If you love a pretty picture, do see the flower prints lining our Cardcade. They are stunningly framed, and look as elegant as originals. Some are less than 20.00, others are 35.00 . . . For travelers who may have forgotten to bring a baby food warmer along to the Poconos, I must mention one in our housewares department at 88c made to sell for 1.25. The liner doubles as a poacher for eggs . . . If I were furnishing a cottage either for summer or year around use, I would certainly invest in our rustic looking gourmet ovenproof sets of Pfaltzgraff pottery in rich, shiny brown. Starter sets are only 7.95. I also like our brown Roseville pottery pitchers in varied sizes, priced from 89c to 2.98 . . . Why not shop Wyckoff's today, 9 to 9?

Every Woman Can Find Own Fashion

By Bobby Westbrook Daily Record Family Fare Editor

New York — Mid-week mutterings have taken the place of the early cheers from the nation's fashion press as the constant parade of New York Couture Group designers tends to blur and fashions, which at first made news, now seem merely repetitious.

This is not the fault of the designers but of their place in the program. Only an exceptionally loud musical fanfare by fashion's perennial pianist, Sammy Wilson, or exceptionally good commentators can make fashion reporters come alive.

One such commentator was Rudolph, who interspersed descriptions of his own designs with some common sense observations. Within the framework of the fluid freedom of the new styles, he pointed out, each woman can find her own fashion.

Rudolph himself seems to let the fabrics determine the silhouette. Chiffons, matte jersey, silk crepe and lightweight wools are sculptured into dresses which cling gently to the figure. Weaves of greater density: brocades, mattalesse, peau d'ange and satin often present wide expanses in full-blown skirts and the capelike backs of jackets and coats.

Skirts represent his expressions of fabric. A sunburst with accordion pleats stitched to just above the knees before being released into a flounced hemline; a birdcage skirt of vertical spaghetti loops in tiers; a skirt of midnight green chiffon with its flutter emphasized by the uneven hemline which seems to dip at random.

There is nothing random about the way Arthur Jablow's designer, David Kidd, has integrated suits, skirts, veston, coat and dress. In his "multiple concept" the suit with their own blouses are rhythmically joined together to form a dress.

In the Nat Kaplan collection, Sylvia Kaplap uses flare-on-flare in costumes with cutaway jackets over flared skirts; overblouses over pleated skirts, or blouson bodices over flared or gored skirts.

The collection also boasts its own "fun dresses," including a black dress, all-over accordion pleated, with the skirt flared with a black satin hemline band. The dress can be drawn into a sheath with its belt or it can be released into the chic-est possible muu-

Edward Abbott's designs by Wilson Folmar achieve glamour in terms of the cardigan, the shirtwaist dress and the halter with slash pockets in the formality of antique brocade or lame, with the flutter of ostrich or long silk fringe. This season's version of his "cocktail shaker" dress is of white crepe set all over with gold and silver bugle beads. A deluxe version of the "twin sweater" look is a dress of chiffon with a chiffon sweater all-over pailettes.

Ben Reig's Fall and Winter collection doesn't say anything brand new but says it very well in his vigorous textures, patterns and bold strokes of color. The British school boy look is translated into some of his suits while dresses for evenings-out are highly individualistic.

Hannah Troy's dresses range from the "mere nothing" little dress retailing around $100 to one $1,500 number which features a two-piece sheath encrusted in canary diamond stones and crystal. Restrained glamour glowed from one ensemble of a satinwood evening coat over a sheath embroidered in pearls.

In the face of Samuel Winston's fabrics, however, these seemd mere bagatelles. His designer, Roxane, used for one number Bombay pink had set with jewels pailettes and crystals which, with its matching cocoon jacket, sells for $4,000.

"Sells??", the fashion press queried. Winston was evasive: several are now being made up. However, another number which is selling well, he said, is composed of tiers of cascading silver crystals over a columnar background sheath covered with gold sequins. This one sells for a mere $1,250.

YARDS OF SKIRT fan out from a smooth hipline for this Fall 1961 Ben Reig cocktail costume in black waved silk. The brief, demi-fitted jacket is cover-up for the sleeveless bodice of the dress.

A TWO-PIECE LOOK for a cocktail aress of silk and Lurex brocade combined with silk taffeta—from Edward Abbott's Fall 1961 collection by Wilson Folmar. The bow-tied bodice in peach and gold blouses slightly above a peach-toned skirt shaped in soft, flaring folds.
